WEATHER PRANKS WHIP A NINE-STATE AREA

BLIZZARDS IN THE NORTH, TORNADOES RAGE IN THE SOUTH

KNOWN DEATH TOLL IN STORMS HAS MOUNTED TO 38

WIND STORMS IN TEXAS, ARKANSAS AND MISSISSIPPI

Chicago, Feb. 27.—(UP) — Blizzards in the north, spring thaws in the north and midwest and tornadoes in the south have spread death, suffering and a threat of epidemics over a nine-state area between the Canadian border and the Gulf of Mexico.

The known death toll in the series of weather pranks mounted to 38 in Texas, Arkansas and Mississippi where wind storms and twisters struck Monday.

Floods are imminent in Ohio, Indiana, parts of Missouri, Arkansas, Tennesseee and Mississippi. Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa were experiencing blizzards.

At Duncan, Miss., where twenty-one persons were killed in the wind storm Monday, a corps of nurses and relief workers fought to prevent diseases, following in the wake of the storm.

Waters in Mississippi streams were reported subsiding but further rains would bring them out of their banks. Danger from influenza kept Red Cross workers and physicians constantly on watch.

Texas reported clear skies and normal weather, following two freakish tornadoes which ripped through the northeastern part of the state, leaving four dead, a dozen injured and a half million dollars damage.

The northeastern part of Ohio is threatened with flood. Seventy-five families were rescued at Springfield and Hamilton when they were marooned by flood waters. Two hundred families were isolated at Newart when the Locking river went out of its banks.

In Indiana, streams in the southern part of the state were reported rising at a rate of four inches an hour, with flood stage expected this morning. Southern Illinois, southeastern and southwestern Missouri reported waters rising at an alarming rate.

Snow blanketed Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Railroad trains were running far behind schedule and bus service was cancelled in parts of Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Wisconsin may experience floods, streams in the state being piled high with snow and ice and a sudden change to warm weather would cause high waters.

Duncan, Miss., Feb. 27. — Cold added to the suffering in storm stricken Mississippi Delta today as preparations were made to bury the 34 dead and to care for the injured and homeless.

Many scantily clad survivors huddled about small open fires or in tents as the cold of the Mississippi lowland early morning chilled them to the bone. Many wrapped in old clothes gathered hurriedly from the ruins and wrecked homes formed a "soup line" for breakfast today.

Red Cross was caring for more than 50 injured here and for approximately 200 homeless. Many of the injured in the delta have been taken to hospitals at Clarksdale and Greenville.

No additional deaths were reported last night or early today to swell the total reached yesterday when four deaths were reported in Arkansas and 30 in western Mississippi.

Duncan, with 21 dead, and 50 injured, was the hardest hit. The little town of 700 population was left in virtual ruins and with a third of its population dead, injured or homeless.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 27.—Thousands of tons of ice, loosed by thaws, swept down from the narrow Sangamon river today, endangering bridges and ripping out telephone and telegraph lines.

In the wake of the ice jams came flood waters, spreading over lowlands and periling livestock. Two bridges at Chandlerville, west of here, fell before the ice jams and another was weakening.

Dynamite was used in a futile attempt to save a Jacksonville and Havana railroad bridge over the Sangamon.

St. Paul—The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Hawley was closed today because of poor paper and depleted reserves.

'AIR TRAIN' WITH TWO ENGINELESS GLIDERS IN TEST

Cassell, Germany, Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—An "air train" consisting of a plane with two engineless gliders as trailers has appeared fairly successful in tests here. The two trailers were uncoupled at a height of 1,500 feet and glided safely to the ground while the plane continued. It was hoped to demonstrate that the trailers could be made practical for dropping off way passengers from a non-stop through plane.

THOMPSON IS NOT WIPED OFF THE MAP

CHICAGO ALDERMANIC ELECTIONS ONLY JOGGLE HIS THRONE

"BIG BILL THE BUILDER" FAR FROM BEING WIPED OUT

Chicago, Feb. 27.—(UP) — The Chicago aldermanic elections, billed by reformers as the stroke that would wipe Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson off the political map, appear to have done little more than joggle his throne.

Out of the peaceful balloting on candidates for 50 seats in the Chicago city council today came numerous victories and surprises for both sides. But "Big Bill the Builder" was far from wiped out.

With as high a percentage of success in the run-off election on April 7 as he enjoyed in Tuesday's voting Mayor Thompson will retain enough sympathetic aldermen to control the council to the end of his term in 1931.

The wave of reform that has gathered momentum with each new gang murder or massacre was too weak to break through the Thompson strongholds.

Six members of the present council, four of them Thompsonites, were defeated and in nine wards the final result awaits the run-off. Four of the candidates in the nine wards awaiting the April election are Thompson men.

The greatest surprise of the election was that no one was murdered, kidnaped or slugged. Police Commissioner William Russell organized the most elaborate system of guards ever accorded an aldermanic election. The result was that not a shot was fired.

"It was the quietest election we ever held," Commissioner Russell reported.

Minnesota Senate Passes Appropriation Bill of Over $10,000,000 For State Institutions

BIG THREE ESTIMATE IS RAISED $328,750

PASSAGE OF BOARD OF CONTROL APPROPRIATIONS BILL SECOND DEFEAT FOR BIG THREE

ORDER ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS FOR FEEBLE MINDED AT FARIBAULT, ETC.

By HECTOR PERRIER

St. Paul, Feb. 27.—The Minnesota senate today unanimously passed an appropriation bill calling for expenditures of $10,023,700 in state institutions wibtin the next two years, or $328,750 more than was recommended by the Big Three.

The passage of the board of control appropriations bill marked the second defeat of the Big Three in the senate during the past 24 hours.

On Tuesday the finance committee went over the heads of the department of administration and finance to recommend the budget requests of the Minnesota University regents and the state teachers college board.

The largest increases in the board of control bill were:

An appropriation of $125,000 for additional buildings at the school for the feeble minded at Faribault.

Amendments to the measure introduced by Senator A. J. Rockne, Zumbrota, included:

A $65,000 appropriation for a gymnasium at the school for the deaf at Faribault; $5,000 for equipment; $6,000 for additional land; $10,000 for added equipment at the feeble mined school; $4,000 for a refrigeration plant at the Red Wing training school; $12,400 for a generating unit at the Anoka asylum, and $8,500 for a water softener at the St. Peter asylum.

Passage of the bill and the amendments was seen as a major victory for the senate finance committee and particularly Senator Rockne, who has made a strong fight for better facilities in the institutions for the unfortunates.

The senate passed an amendment also introduced by Senator Rackne, which struck out an appropriation for the erection of a state asylum for the insane at Stillwater. Rockne said that the building should be constructed out of money paid the state by relatives of inmates.

The fiery Zumbrota solon rounded out a busy day by the introduction of a concurrent resolution which asked that the federal government return to the state a share of the federal income tax. One-third to one-half of the income tax is requested on the grounds that the state carries the heaviest expenses of government.

Senator Laura Naplin, Thief River Falls, introduced a bill which would prohibit persons convicted of driving an automobile while drunk from operating a car for a one-year period.

Senator G. D. McCubrey, Moorhead, introduced a bill which provide for the erection of a monument to Alexander Ramsey on the capitol grounds and Senator A. T. Nelson, Minneapolis, offered a bill which asked for a $15,000 appropriation for a monument to pioneers and soldiers in the Minneapolis memorial cemetery.

The house game and fish committee today took up the bill for the creation of a 1,750,000 acre game reserve in Lake of the Woods, Beltrami and Koochiching counties. F. R. Duxbury informed the committee that the project would take care of the tax delinquent problem in those counties.

Minneapolis, Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—Fire department officials today planned a rigid inspection of rooming houses at the University of Minnesota following a fire Tuesday night at the Chi Psi fraternity house, the fifth university fire in a month. Fifteen students were driven out of the house by the blaze which originated in the basemnt. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

JAPANESE OIL TANKER RAMMED BY BRITISH SHIP

San Pedro, Calif., Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—The Japanese oil tanker Koyo Maru, outbound for Yokohama with a full cargo of fuel oil, was rammed amidships by the British freighter Fishpool in the outer harbor here today.

A large hold was opened in the Koyo Maru and she was reported to be leaking oil. The bow of the Fishpool was damaged. Both vessels are lying at anchor.

Cause of the collision was not learned by harbor officials.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was slightly injured and his fiancee, Miss Anne Morrow, escaped uninjured in a plane crash near Mexico City this afternoon, according to a telephone dispatch to the Brainerd Dispatch from the United Press at 3:50 P. M. today.

HIJACKING GANGS FIGHT AT BUFFALO

POLICE OPEN FIRE ON BOTH GANGSTER CARS, 2 MEN WOUNDED

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 27.—(UP)—Two men were wounded, one seriously today as a result of an outbreak between what police term rival hijacking gangs.

Answering frantic telephone calls from residents of the east side, a riot squad arrived to find gangs firing on each other from closed automobiles at a distance of 50 feet.

Police opened fire on both vehicles. One gangster car escaped. The second was found to contain Edward Tucholka, 20, perhaps mortally wounded; Felix Slowiak, 26, shot in the leg, and the driver, who was uninjured.

Improvises Electric Chair and Commits Suicide

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—Rather than face trial for assault, George Mayo, chef in a cafeteria here, improvised an electric chair and committed suicide.

Mayo brought a cord from a stand lamp, fastened two electrodes to the split ends of the wire and placed them against his head. Holding the electrodes in place with a hat he sat down in a chair and turned on the current.

He had been charged with assaulting his stepdaughter with a deadly weapon.

Wright Field, Dayton, O., Feb. 27.—(UP)—Lieutenant Harry Johnson of Selfridge Field, Michigan, landed here this afternoon after an unheralded attempt to shatter the world's altitude record. It was not determined immediately whether he had succeeded.

Johnson was unable to say how high he had flown. His baragraph stuck at 34,000 feet but he went considerably higher than that, he said.

The world's record is 38,400 feet.

The fact that the indicator stuck did not prevent the instrument from registering, Johnson said.

RUMORS THAT COL. STEWART IS TO GO TO COURT

IN EVENT HE LOSES PROXY FIGHT TO JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Chicago, Feb. 27—(UP)—Rumors strengthened today that Colonel Robert W. Stewart will resort to the courts to retain his post as chairman of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana in event he loses the proxy fight to John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The decision of the stockholders of the company meeting March 7 in Whiting, Ind., may not end the battle for control of the billion dollar corporation, according to these reports.

Those who were discussing the possibilities in the proxy war pointed out that Stewart might be able to restrain the Rockefellers from interfering with the corporate acts of the company under the terms of the federal court decision dissolving the Standard Oil trust.

The Rockefellers were named as defendants in that case and the decision said Rockefeller must not do anything to influence the policy or corporate act of the Indiana Company.

KILLS SELF BECAUSE OF FANCIED SHORTAGE

Newark, N. J., Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—It was written into the records of the Harrison branch postoffice today that Albert J. Kubler, who committed suicide because of $20, went to an honorable death. Before shooting himself through the head, the 64-year-old postal clerk left a letter to his wife, Theresa, which said: He felt himself going insane and was disgraced by a $20 shortage on his stamp accounts. Postal inspectors said all his accounts were in order—the shortage existing only in Kubler's addled brain.

6 MEMBERS OF CREW DROWN WHEN SHIP WRECKED IN FOG

Cherbourg, Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—Six members of the crew of the French steamship St. Malo were drowned today when the vessel was wrecked in fog and storm off Barfleur. Seven others succeeded in reaching Cherbourg but one of them died later.

MARSHAL FOCH FACES CRISIS IN HIS ILLNESS

LUNGS IMPROVE, TEMPERATURE IS 98.96, PULSE IS 86

DOCTORS ADMIT ANXIETY BECAUSE OF SEVERITY OF URAEMIC CRISIS

Paris, Feb. 27.—(UP) — Marshal Ferdinand Foch showed progress today in fighting off a grave crisis in his illness.

An official bulletin issued by his physicians said:

"There is a slight improvement in the condition of the lungs. The temperature is 98.96 and the pulse 86."

The marshal passed a better night and his temperature fell almost two degrees. None of the doctors remained with him during the night but gathered at the bedside at 9 A. M. They admitted their anxiety because of the severity of the present uraemic crisis.

It was felt generally that Marshal Foch, while he might survive the present crisis, would not live long.

Dr. De Gennes, one of his physicians, was pessimistic. Explaining Monday's sinking spell, he said:

"When an invalid nears the end we must expect frequent changes in the condition but it is impossible to predict how long Marshal Foch's remarkable vitality will continue."

Foch clung to life with indomitable spirit, with a chance that the stubborn inability to admit defeat which carried his troops to success against odds in the world war would bring him through the fourth crisis in his serious illness.

Foch was holing out against a heart and lung condition which his five doctors conceded would normally prove fatal to a man of 77. His resistance was powerful, but it was admitted that the strain was telling.

The marshal's condition is complicated by uraemia.

Foch lies in a rear room of the palatial old mansion presented to him by the French government after the world war. His wife and daughters have been at his bedside or close by at all times. Other visitors have been excluded.

The supreme command of the allied forces during the world war, who became seriously ill last fall, gave symptoms two weeks ago of recovering from his illness but another relapse occurred Monday.

He had survived three previous crisis, the most serious of which came in the middle of January, when the gravity of his condition first became known.

It became increasingly evident during the ensuing weeks that Foch was fighting his own battle as well as the doctors. "I'm seriously hit, am I not?" he remarked once to Dr. Daveniere. "But I'll resist," he added firmly.

OFFERED POST IN CABINET OF HOOVER

LEARNED ON HIGHEST AUTHORITY THAT HE HAS ACCEPTED POSITION

CABINET SLATE TO BE COMPLETE WITHIN NEXT 24 OR 36 HOURS

Washington, Feb. 27. — (UP) — William D. Mitchell, solicitor-general of the United States, has been offered the attorney generalship in the Hoover cabinet and has accepted the post.

This was learned on highest authority here today as President-elect Hoover prepared to complete the make-up of his cabinet. The cabinet slate will be complete within the next 24 or 36 hours, it was learned today.

By THOMAS L. STOKES

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 27.—President-elect Hoover is awaiting today the decision of William J. Donovan, known in world war days as "Wild Bill," to an offer of the post of secretary of war in his cabinet.

The young assistant attorney general, who wanted to be attorney, has held Mr. Hoover off for two days on the alternative offer. He had not accepted today, despite many erroneous reports yesterday that he had.

Donovan yesterday delayed his departure for New Mexico, scheduled for last night, and was to see the president-elect again today.

The uncertainty over Donovan, who is popular here and has many friends, has overshadowed all other cabinet developments. The probability is that the post he wanted will be filled by one of the men who worked with him in the justice department—Solicitor General William D. Mitchell.

The Donovan situation is all the more interesting because the assistant attorney general was one of Mr. Hoover's most active campaign lieutenants and advisers and because of the wet and dry fight. Donovan was not satisfactory to the drys for attorney general.

The president-elect eliminated him from that post some time ago, and began the search for a dry.

Donovan arrived here with the hope that he would get the goal of his ambition. When he found out it was denied him, he did not react so favorably to other offers, and it is understood other posts were held out beside the secretary of war, the only cabinet post for which he was considered.

Washington, Feb. 27.—William J. Donovan, assistant attorney general, today turned down an offer of secretary of war in the Hoover administration in a conference with the president-elect at his S street home here today. Donovan will retire to private practice of law after March 4.

Donovan's rejection of the post came shortly after it had been learned from authoritative sources that William D. Mitchell, solicitor-general, had been offered and accepted the post of attorney general in Mr. Hoover's cabinet.

Mr. Hoover was somewhat disturbed over reports that Mitchell is a democrat. In discussing the appointment with visitors, he has pointed out that the solicitor-general has supported the republican national ticket several times and has been identified with forces in Minnesota, his home state, who fought the farmer-labor and non-partisan movements.

Mitchell, Mr. Hoover has pointed out, supported Charles Evans Hughes for the presidency in 1916 and likewise supported Calvin Coolidge in 1924 and voted for Mr. Hoover last November.

Donovan, his friends explained, took the position that he never did seek a cabinet position, but if one were considered by him it should be the post for which he considers himself fitted by training and experience, which was the attorney generalship.

Speculation about the secretary of agriculture centered upon Dante Pierce, Des Moines, Iowa, farm paper publisher, who was called in this afternoon for a conference. Pierce

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 27.—(UP)—Two men were wounded, one seriously today as a result of an outbreak between what police term rival hijacking gangs.

Answering frantic telephone calls from residents of the east side, a riot squad arrived to find gangs firing on each other from closed automobiles at a distance of 50 feet.

Police opened fire on both vehicles. One gangster car escaped. The second was found to contain Edward Tucholka, 29, perhaps mortally wounded; Felix Slowiak, 26, shot in the leg, and the driver, who was uninjured.

Improvises Electric Chair and Commits Suicide

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—Rather than face trial for assault, George Mayo, chef in a cafeteria here, improvised an electric chair and committed suicide.

Mayo brought a cord from a stand lamp, fastened two electrodes to the split ends of the wire and placed them against his head. Holding the electrodes in place with a hat he sat down in a chair and turned on the current.

He had been charged with assaulting his stepdaughter with a deadly weapon.

Wright Field, Dayton, O., Feb. 27. —(UP)—Lieutenant Harry Johnson of Selfridge Field, Michigan, landed here this afternoon after an unheralded attempt to shatter the world's altitude record. It was not determined immediately whether he had succeeded.

Johnson was unable to say how high he had flown. His baragraph stuck at 34,000 feet but he went considerably higher than that, he said.

The world's record is 38,400 feet.

The fact that the indicator stuck did not prevent the instrument from registering, Johnson said.

RUMORS THAT COL. STEWART IS TO GO TO COURT

IN EVENT THAT HE LOSES PROXY FIGHT TO JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Chicago, Feb. 27—(UP)—Rumors strengthened today that Colonel Robert W. Stewart will resort to the courts to retain his post as chairman of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana in event he loses the proxy fight to John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The decision of the stockholders of the company meeting March 7 in Whiting, Ind., may not end the battle for control of the billion dollar corporation, according to these reports.

Those who were discussing the possibilities in the proxy war pointed out that Stewart might be able to restrain the Rockefellers from interfering with the corporate acts of the company under the terms of the federal court decision dissolving the Standard Oil trust.

The Rockefellers were named as defendants in that case and the decision said Rockefeller must not do anything to influence the policy or corporate act of the Indiana Company.

KILLS SELF BECAUSE OF FANCIED SHORTAGE

Newark, N. J., Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—It was written into the records of the Harrison branch postoffice today that Albert J. Kubler, who committed suicide because of $20, went to an honorable death. Before shooting himself through the head, the 64-year-old postal clerk left a letter to his wife, Theresa, which said: He felt himself going insane and was disgraced by a $20 shortage on his stamp accounts. Postal inspectors said all his accounts were in order—the shortage existing only in Kubler's addled brain.

6 MEMBERS OF CREW DROWN WHEN SHIP WRECKED IN FOG

Cherbourg, Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—Six members of the crew of the French steamship St. Malo were drowned today when the vessel was wrecked in fog and storm off Barfleur. Seven others succeeded in reaching Cherbourg but one of them died later.

The ship left here for Le Havre yesterday.

JACKIE COOGAN RETURNS HOME

New York, Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—Jackie Coogan, once the screen's infant idol and now a vaudeville star, returned to this country with his parents and his younger brother, Robert, on the Ile de France.

Jackie has completed a five-months European vaudeville tour. A brief tour in the United States and then back to school books is the program for the lad, his mother said.

SEARCHERS SEEK BODY OF 3 YEAR OLD GIRL

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—Searchers were dragging the Arkansas river here today for the body of Virginia Patterson, 3, who Arthur Baker, 5, said he pushed off a bridge when she refused to let him play with her toys. Arthur first said Virginia had fallen off.

REICHSTAG STANDS BY GOVERNMENT

Berlin, Feb. 27.—(U.P.)—The reichstag, by a rising vote, rejected misconfidence in the German cabinet against the votes of communists and nationalists today and in a like manner rejected misconfidence in Wilhelm Groener, minister of defense, against the votes of communists.

LE BRIX'S PLANE CRASHES TODAY AT THEINZEIK

Rangoon, Burma, Feb. 27.—(U.P.) —Lieut. Commander Joseph Le Brix and Antoine Paillard, making a flight from Istres, France, to Saigon, French Indo-China, escaped injury when their plane crashed today at Theinzeik, 120 miles east of here.

Le Brix's plane was destroyed. The plane was 15 hours overdue at Saigon when a wireless message reported the accident.

MARSHAL FOCH FACES CRISIS IN HIS ILLNESS

LUNGS IMPROVE, TEMPERATURE IS 98.96, PULSE IS 86

DOCTORS ADMIT ANXIETY BECAUSE OF SEVERITY OF URAEMIC CRISIS

Paris, Feb. 27.—(UP) — Marshal Ferdinand Foch showed progress today in fighting off a grave crisis in his illness.

An official bulletin issued by his physicians said:

"There is a slight improvement in the condition of the lungs. The temperature is 98.96 and the pulse 86."

The marshal passed a better night and his temperature fell almost two degrees. None of the doctors remained with him during the night but gathered at the bedside at 9 A. M. They admitted their anxiety because of the severity of the present uraemic crisis.

It was felt generally that Marshal Foch, while he might survive the present crisis, would not live long.

Dr. De Gennes, one of his physicians, was pessimistic. Explaining Monday's sinking spell, he said:

"When an invalid nears the end we must expect frequent changes in the condition but it is impossible to predict how long Marshal Foch's remarkable vitality will continue."

Foch clung to life with indomitable spirit, with a chance that the stubborn inability to admit defeat which carried his troops to success against odds in the world war would bring him through the fourth crisis in his serious illness.

Foch was holing out against a heart and lung condition which his five doctors conceded would normally prove fatal to a man of 77. His resistance was powerful, but it was admitted that the strain was telling.

The marshal's condition is complicated by uraemia.

Foch lies in a rear room of the palatial old mansion presented to him by the French government after the world war. His wife and daughters have been at his bedside or close by at all times. Other visitors have been excluded.

This is the first serious illness of Foch's life.

The supreme command of the allied forces during the world war, who became seriously ill last fall, gave symptoms two weeks ago of recovering from his illness but another relapse occurred Monday.

He had survived three previous crisis, the most serious of which came in the middle of January, when the gravity of his condition first became known.

It became increasingly evident during the ensuing weeks that Foch was fighting his own battle as well as the doctors. "I'm seriously hit, am I not?" he remarked once to Dr. Daveniere. "But I'll resist," he added firmly.

OFFERED POST IN CABINET OF HOOVER

LEARNED ON HIGHEST AUTHORITY THAT HE HAS ACCEPTED POSITION

CABINET SLATE TO BE COMPLETE WITHIN NEXT 24 OR 36 HOURS

Washington, Feb. 27. — (UP) — William D. Mitchell, solicitor-general of the United States, has been offered the attorney generalship in the Hoover cabinet and has accepted the post.

This was learned on highest authority here today as President-elect Hoover prepared to complete the make-up of his cabinet. The cabinet slate will be complete within the next 24 or 36 hours, it was learned today.

By THOMAS L. STOKES

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 27.—President-elect Hoover is awaiting today the decision of William J. Donovan, known in world war days as "Wild Bill," to an offer of the post of secretary of war in his cabinet.

The young assistant attorney general, who wanted to be attorney, has held Mr. Hoover off for two days on the alternative offer. He had not accepted today, despite many erroneous reports yesterday that he had.

Donovan yesterday delayed his departure for New Mexico, scheduled for last night, and was to see the president-elect again today.

The uncertainty over Donovan, who is popular here and has many friends, has overshadowed all other cabinet developments. The probability is that the post he wanted will be filled by one of the men who worked with him in the justice department—Solicitor General William D. Mitchell.

The Donovan situation is all the more interesting because the assistant attorney general was one of Mr. Hoover's most active campaign lieutenants and advisers and because of the wet and dry fight. Donovan was not satisfactory to the drys for attorney general.

The president-elect eliminated him from that post some time ago, and began the search for a dry.

Donovan arrived here with the hope that he would get the goal of his ambition. When he found out it was denied him, he did not react so favorably to other offers, and it is understood other posts were held out beside the secretary of war, the only cabinet post for which he was considered.

Washington, Feb. 27.—William J. Donovan, assistant attorney general, today turned down an offer of secretary of war in the Hoover administration in a conference with the president-elect at his S street home here today. Donovan will retire to private practice of law after March 4.

Donovan's rejection of the post came shortly after it had been learned from authoritative sources that William D. Mitchell, solicitor-general, had been offered and accepted the post of attorney general in Mr. Hoover's cabinet.

Mr. Hoover was somewhat disturbed over reports that Mitchell is a democrat. In discussing the appointment with visitors, he has pointed out that the solicitor-general has supported the republican national ticket several times and has been identified with forces in Minnesota, his home state, who fought the farmer-labor and non-partisan movements.

Mitchell, Mr. Hoover has pointed out, supported Charles Evans Hughes for the presidency in 1916 and likewise supported Calvin Coolidge in 1924 and voted for Mr. Hoover last November.

Donovan, his friends explained, took the position that he never did seek a cabinet position, but if one were considered by him it should be the post for which he considers himself fitted by training and experience, which was the attorney generalship.

Speculation about the secretary of agriculture centered upon Dante Pierce, Des Moines, Iowa, farm paper publisher, who was called in this afternoon for a conference. Pierce

"BE YOUR AGE"

"BE your age," says the Woman's Home Companion.

But what is it to be? A woman is as old as she looks, and she is not going to look any older than she can possibly help. A man is as old as he feels, and even he is becoming concerned about his looks.

The Woman's Home Companion then takes up the subject editorially:

Most older women make a great mistake in wearing their skirts very short, even if their legs are well shaped. This is not criticizing any woman for looking as well as she can, at any age. But women do grow older and nobody can beat the game much.

In regard to skirts, the whole architectural scheme of the elder woman's figure should be one of dignity, and you can't get it with short skirts. Shoes should be inconspicuous and give adequate support to heel and instep. An insecure footing and noticeably careful gait are two unmistakable signs of age, and may often be avoided by proper choice of shoes.

It is entirely possible for a woman to be much nicer looking at 60 than at 40. But she certainly won't be as young a woman, as her methods of decorating her person should not be the same. Every age has its own limitations, standards and assets. The older woman should recognize, accept and capitalize hers. My quarrel with the look young school is that it attempts to iron out these personal characteristics or to dress them up so that nobody in the world would dream that the mature woman had lived, seen or knew any more than the veriest youngster.

As one grows older, adjustments in the technique of grooming are necessary. There is, for example, the gradual color change in hair, eyes and complexion. The brown eyed, brown haired girl who has always worn browns finds her hair turning gray and her complexion growing paler. Brown ceases to flatter her, and if she is wise she turns to greens, grays or plum shades. Only the young fresh skin can dare a bright rouge or any rouge in quantity. Any showing of face powder makes a haggard skin look more so.

PRAISE FOR BRAINERD MAN

IT must be pleasing to Ed Day of Brainerd to read the many commendatory words said about his service with the Northern Pacific railway company. On February 28 the veteran conductor is to retire, and he leaves behind him a long record of faithful and honorable service.

Mr. Day has had a wide acquaintance with the traveling public. People will miss him. We know travelers who waited for "Ed Day's train" to put loved ones on, knowing the conductor took real care of them.

When you talk about train service on a passenger train, a kind, obliging conductor is the actual representative of the transportation company. Forty-two years Mr. Day has served as a conductor and in that period he has covered some 2,500,000 miles in charge of trains.

He has never been late for service and that means more than the average man takes into consideration. When a conductor is late he delays his own train. Day was safety plus personified, for never was he negligent, nor did any of his passengers suffer injury.

Now that is a proud record to make and to retire with and to leave to a big transportation company for other employes to ponder over. Day was observing every one of the safety rules before they were ever promulgated.

Day goes on the pension roll, but he can rest assured that his example as a conscientious employe will not be forgotten, neither will the people who were his passengers forget Ed.

THE SMALL THINGS COUNT

IT'S the little things in life that count, and when totalled, cast a distinct and decided influence.

That was brought out in the address made by Dr. Nesmith Nelson at the Rotary club. He was referring to employes whose words and actions mean much. They can be taught to "sell" Brainerd to the tourist or casual visitor. The welcome manner, the desire to impart accurate information about the town, means much in creating pleasant relations and encouraging a desire on the part of the visitor to again visit the establishment, and in so doing to again come to Brainerd.

Representatives of business and professional life, employes in civic life can do their part, and so can official Brainerd through its regularly elected and appointed servants of the public.

Our mayor, Frank E. Little, welcomes officially every convention or similar public gathering. Our police officers give much information to tourists and others. Our other city and county officers are regular mines of information on all conceivable subjects. Our Chamber of Commerce, the Lions and Rotarians, all civic, fraternal and other clubs and organizations are frequently called upon to assist in matters relating to the public welfare.

When this community spirit is farly recognized and observed and its importance conceded then we really become a city in which cooperation in city building is the watchword.

IT is an inexorable law, not of business alone but of nature itself, that effort is one of life's basic necessities. The moment a man stops truly exerting himself, that moment he begins to retrograde, to go down hill. He cannot do otherwise because of the cold, hard fact that it is utterly beyond human possibility to stand still. All life is movement forward or movement backward.

THE Democrats are considering the plan of organizing a state-wide Democratic body of the faithful which will function all the time instead of once every four years.

A CYNIC writing about the marriage relation claims that all men look alike and talk alike after they have been married a couple of years.

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Irene Robeline married Guinn Holden, the young and handsome Texas minister, she expected to win his love. Guinn, a year before, had married the beautiful blonde Lilith, a gay and coquettish girl, who boasted of her ability to win him. Lilith died at childbirth. For eighteen years Irene fought a secret battle to root out the "gold and white" ghost of Guinn's first wife. She slaved in the household on the slender salary of the preacher. She was a splendid mother to the second Lilith, who grew up with all the beauty of the first as well as a cold, selfish, spoiled character. Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, Irene's children, were always secondary to Lilith with Holden. Tina wore her cast-off clothes and used her old books in college. After graduation Lilith became engaged to Roger Devereaux, son of wealthy parents. Later she postponed her marriage and persuaded her father to give her a year in New York studying voice with the $2,000 left him by a parishioner. She was ecstatically happy in the big city, especially after meeting Vivien Winthrop, who entertained her in her palatial home. Bill Chester, heir to millions, and engaged to an heiress, is attracted to Lilith, whose beauty is ravishing. Back home Tina is graduating from college and Irene suffers utmost humiliation when Guinn fails to give her a graduation present. Later Tina has a house party. Sheba, the colored cook, tells Roger Devereaux he has a "hoodoo." Dan Ripley, rich, young, handsome, returned from a trip, spends time with Tina, who works at her drawing and helps at home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

IRENE herself would like to know how this hoodoo was working. Dan came oftener than anyone, but apparently he came to see the family at large as much as Tina Guinn went often to see his father, who listlessly endured the heat, and lay in his steamer chair in the shady garden most of the day, careless as to what happened. Dan was picking up the details of his father's law practice and his business affairs, but he took plenty of time to play, too.

Now and then Irene went to the big house on the hill, to see the judge, and asked herself how anyone could be as indifferent to life as he was, but the thought that his life had been broken by the death of his love sobered her always. How would it be with her, if Guinn should be taken from her?

As the heat ripened the watermelons in the patch and burst open the cotton bolls in the fields, so it brought a rosier beauty, a more captivating grace to Tina, her mother thought. She watched her with a pride that was triumph and pain, because of her intense desire that this dear daughter might find happiness as complete as this unsatisfactory life alllowed.

The lumberman's son and the ranchman's son wrote often to Tina, and Irene wondered if anything their letters contained had power to bring that soft blush of happiness to her child's face, that joyous curve to her lips, that light in her dark eyes.

One day she made bold to ask her, "Do you like either of these young men, Tina?"

The girl shook her curly mop. "I like them awfully well — but there's something more than that to love, isn't there? They say they love me — but that isn't enough, is it?"

"No, that isn't enough. There must be love on both sides. Don't ever make a compromise with love, my dear."

To herself she added passionately, "If I had held out for the reality of love long ago when Guinn asked me to marry him, if I had scorned this poor substitute love that he offered me, maybe he would have come to love me in time. Maybe he would have loved me if I hadn't married him!"

Tina mustn't marry until she was sure of love, of the supreme place in the heart of her husband!

She looked at the girl and said whimsically, halfway between a smile and a tear, "But a great passion is rather devastating."

Tina spoke firmly, "But I'd rather be devastated than just comfortable."

What is to be done with your child, or for her, when her whole happiness may depend on whether a certain young man admires the color of her eyes, the texture of her skin, the way she wears her clothes? And sometimes young men were cruel in their shortsightedness. . . .

One day Tina came in from a drive with Dr. Lundy. "We went to see the little Bates baby," she reported. "And what do you suppose Uncle Will told the mother to give it? Pot liquor! Who ever heard of feeding little babies on that?"

Irene's eyes showed ironic mirth. "Aunt Viny gave it to Lilith when she was a year old." Then a twinkle of mischief came into her glance. "And you wouldn't be alive yourself if it hadn't been for pot liquor!"

"How funny!" said Tina, as she went to meet Dan, who yodeled from the hall at that moment.

"Dan, Mother has just been telling me that I was a weakly baby and they kept me alive with pot liquor. Just fancy!"

"Good for pot liquor," said Dan. . . .

Summer time might be a vacation for most people, but not so for the pastor's wife. The boys had part-time jobs, so they had to be gotten up early and started off, while Tina must be allowed to sleep, after her company in the evenings. Pat had to be kept healthy and amused, and the church was forever making demands. She must look after Guinn, to keep him from over-exerting himself, yet without neglecting any responsibility. She must know who was ill or in trouble or in need, so that she or Quinn might go to call, and she must answer constant telephone calls to keep him from being interrupted.

"Having a husband and five children and a church is enough to keep any woman from rusting," she told Will Lundy one day.

"I want to see you rest more," he accused her.

"I'm all right."

"Funny how some women fag themselves out doing for other folks, while some women, Abby Whitaker for example, spend their time petting dogs and making up their faces. I'd like to see a law passed requiring everybody to do a certain amount of useful work. You'd land in jail first rattle of the box."

"Yes, the town will give her a grand funeral when she dies, but that won't rest her any," snapped Miss Mattie. "Then in a year her husband will marry again and give all her savings to a second wife."

"Don't be personal, Miss Mattie," laughed Irene. "Remember that I'm a second myself."

"You're feebleminded, but we're fond of you," said Will. "I don't know why I ever try to change you. I ought to recognize a hopeless case when I see one."

"If we all faced facts, the world would stop tomorrow," countered Irene cheerfully.

"Yes, imbecile optimism is what keeps the wheels going," growled Lundy.

"Some call it faith," Irene had a dreamy look in her eyes. . . .

The heat created a strange emotional tension, even while the physical being was relaxed and inert. Everyone seemed to feel it, and the telephone jangled nervously all day long as people thought up excuses to call the pastor out. Guinn was jaded from the heat and from the incessant demands upon him, till Irene was afraid he would be ill, so one afternoon she made him go upstairs to a darkened room to rest while she put the telephone bell out of commission.

"If anybody is dead or dying they'll send a messenger," she told herself grimly.

Tina was lying down in her room, and Pat was prowling about the house in search of amusement, with an unconquerable aversion to an afternoon nap, for some inexplicable reason. From the kitchen came the sounds of a darky song, as Sheba went on with her ironing:

"'Monday mawnin', 'way fo' day,
White folks got me gwine,
Sad'day night when de sun go down,
True lub on my mind.'"

Irene tried to take a nap herself, but even the pillow felt hot to her cheek, so she sat up and began to sew.

Presently she heard Pat say, "Oh, Tina, you sure can draw!"

"Wha-at?" came in Tina's sleepy drawl.

"These pictures in your book. Looks like Dan when he was a boy."

Tina's voice came quick with anger. "What do you mean, rummaging in my things? Put it down this minute!"

Irene started up in astonishment. Never had she heard Tina speak so to anyone. What could be the matter?

Pat rushed in to her mother, chin quivering, eyes blinking. She still clutched a book in her hands.

"What is it, Pat?" Irene took it from her. She saw a collection of rough sketches, mostly of one subject, Dan, and one on an old sheet of paper that had evidently seen much handling, a sketch, unfinished, of the boy that Dan had been almost ten years before.

Tina came in, in her blue kimono, her cheeks hot with indignation. "She had no right to meddle with my things!"

Pat quivered like a scared puppy, and gulped back her tears.

"Now, now, Tina," Irene said gently. "Pat, you did wrong to rummage in your sister's things without asking her, and you'll not do it any more, will you?"

"No," blubbered Pat.

Tina snatched the book of sketches from her mother and rushed back to her room, her blue kimono streaming behind her like a banner. Pat scuffled off to the kitchen to tell her woes to Sheba, and Irene turned to her sewing.

But her needle soon hung idle in her hands, as her memory pictured a scene, almost ten years before—Dan, with her children in the study, just after his mother's death, sitting to be sketched by Tina. She saw again the sculptured beauty of the boy as it had impressed her at the time, and the eager, absorbed face of the little artist at her task, saw again, too, the interruption of Lilith, with her summons to Dan to come play checkers with her.

Tina had cherished that childish sketch through these years, had spoken sharply to her little sister for merely looking at it.

Irene faced the facts now, with directness. "Tina is in love with Dan," she whispered to herself. "And he hasn't given any sign of being in love with her. What's going to come of it?"

Then she laughed rather shakily. "I guess this is an occasion for imbecile optimism."

She rose and put away her sewing, with a sigh. "Some call it faith."

Area News

Troop 44 of Brainerd are holding a big hike next Sunday and plan on going to Gull Lake where a good time awaits them. Scoutmaster Axel Anderson has a cottage there and plans to entertain the boys in real carnival style. We like to see Scouts keep the "Out" in Scout.

Troop 52 of Aitkin is sponsored by the American Legion this year and looks for this year's Scouting year the biggest ever. Plans are under way for the Legion post to take the Aitkin Scouts to the North Shore of Lake Superior for a five day outing. Scouts of Aitkin are working hard for this privilege.

Brainerd troop 43 is planning to enlarge the troop even bigger than it is at the present time.

Staples troops are planning a Boy Scout drum and bugle corps. We expect the Bugle Corps to equal the splendid Scout band they have at the present time.

Troop 29 of Ironton, Minn., have eight Veteran Scouts in the troop. It shows some real leadership when boys stay with the troop for a period of five years or more. We congratulate Scoutmaster F. G. Mayberry.

Range Boy Scouts are working hard to win the troop honor pennant for the range district which is to be given for the first time at the March Court of Honor at Crosby.

Riverton troop 25 is again going after the Scouting work in real Scout style. For a time they have been inactive. We are looking for some real Scouting from Riverton.

Troop 48 is again active under the leadership of Harold F. Carlson. Mr. Carlson has been a Scout in one of our Range troops before moving to Pine River.

Troop 42 of Brainerd is putting in extra time to pull the troop up to the point where they can give the other troops in the area a good rub in any Scout activities. Much credit should go to Gerald Schrader now acting Scoutmaster.

Plans for an all area Roundup and Merit Badge exposition are under way at the present time. All troops should prepare themselves for the biggest thing in Scouting yet in this area. The all Area Roundup will in all probability be preceeded by District Roundups in the several districts of the area. Be prepared.

A meeting was held Monday, February 25 at the Aitkin Boy Scout district with 14 men present. Mr. Dennerly as district vice president of the council, presided at the meeting. Plans were made to complete their Boy Scout drive and the various committee positions were filled. The Aitkin district committees consist of the following: camping, G. W. Smith, Harold E. Olson, R. F. McHugh; troop organization, F. H. Osterhaut, F. T. Galernault, H. D. McNeil; Court of Honor, Judge Frank Hense, C. A. Larson, F. H. Osterhaut. We congratulate Aitkin upon the splendid Scouting spirit that is manifested.

Scoutmasters are requested to send in news to the Scout office so that we can run it weekly in the Broadcaster. Let's get that co-operative spirit.

"Married Life" Not Worth While
Blames Wives' "Nerves"

"Weak nerves," said a New York doctor recently, "in my estimation wreck more happily married lives than any other cause."

Besides making the sweetest disposition sour and irritable, nervousness is a terrible drain on your vital forces—it saps your youth and your strength and dulls your beauty. What a difference from the bright-eyed, vibrant girl he married. No wonder married life seems unbearable!

But you can get rid of your nervousness—speedily too—and become the steady-nerved, radiant woman you once were. Take a teaspoonful of Tanlac after meals and before going to bed and if it doesn't soon make a new woman of you—doesn't rid you of that tired, strained feeling—go back and get your money.

Go to your druggist now and get a bottle of Tanlac. Millions of folks have started back on the road to youth, health and happiness with this world famous tonic and there is no reason why you, too, can't begin today to rebuild your worn-out tissues and revitalize your entire system.

"BE YOUR AGE"

"BE your age," says the Woman's Home Companion.

But what is it to be? A woman is as old as she looks, and she is not going to look any older than she can possibly help. A man is as old as he feels, and even he is becoming concerned about his looks.

The Woman's Home Companion then takes up the subject editorially:

Most older women make a great mistake in wearing their skirts very short, even if their legs are well shaped. This is not criticizing any woman for looking as well as she can, at any age. But women do grow older and nobody can beat the game much.

In regard to skirts, the whole architectural scheme of the elder woman's figure should be one of dignity, and you can't get it with short skirts. Shoes should be inconspicuous and give adequate support to heel and instep. An insecure footing and noticeably careful gait are two unmistakable signs of age, and may often be avoided by proper choice of shoes.

It is entirely possible for a woman to be much nicer looking at 60 than at 40. But she certainly won't be as young a woman, as her methods of decorating her person should not be the same. Every age has its own limitations, standards and assets. The older woman should recognize, accept and capitalize hers. My quarrel with the look young school is that it attempts to iron out these personal characteristics or to dress them up so that nobody in the world would dream that the mature woman had lived, seen or knew any more than the veriest youngster.

As one grows older, adjustments in the technique of grooming are necessary. There is, for example, the gradual color change in hair, eyes and complexion. The brown eyed, brown haired girl who has always worn browns finds her hair turning gray and her complexion growing paler. Brown ceases to flatter her, and if she is wise she turns to greens, grays or plum shades. Only the young fresh skin can dare a bright rouge or any rouge in quantity. Any showing of face powder makes a haggard skin look more so.

PRAISE FOR BRAINERD MAN

IT must be pleasing to Ed Day of Brainerd to read the many commendatory words said about his service with the Northern Pacific railway company. On February 28 the veteran conductor is to retire, and he leaves behind him a long record of faithful and honorable service.

Mr. Day has had a wide acquaintance with the traveling public. People will miss him. We know travelers who waited for "Ed Day's train" to put loved ones on, knowing the conductor took real care of them.

When you talk about train service on a passenger train, a kind, obliging conductor is the actual representative of the transportation company. Forty-two years Mr. Day has served as a conductor and in that period he has covered some 2,500,000 miles in charge of trains.

He has never been late for service and that means more than the average man takes into consideration. When a conductor is late he delays his own train. Day was safety plus personified, for never was he negligent, nor did any of his passengers suffer injury.

Now that is a proud record to make and to retire with and to leave to a big transportation company for other employes to ponder over. Day was observing every one of the safety rules before they were ever promulgated.

Day goes on the pension roll, but he can rest assured that his example as a conscientious employe will not be forgotten, neither will the people who were his passengers forget Ed.

THE SMALL THINGS COUNT

IT'S the little things in life that count, and when totalled, cast a distinct and decided influence.

That was brought out in the address made by Dr. Nesmith Nelson at the Rotary club. He was referring to employes whose words and actions mean much. They can be taught to "sell" Brainerd to the tourist or casual visitor. The welcome manner, the desire to impart accurate information about the town, means much in creating pleasant relations and encouraging a desire on the part of the visitor to again visit the establishment, and in so doing to again come to Brainerd.

Representatives of business and professional life, employes in civic life can do their part, and so can official Brainerd through its regularly elected and appointed servants of the public.

Our mayor, Frank E. Little, welcomes officially every convention or similar public gathering. Our police officers give much information to tourists and others. Our other city and county officers are regular mines of information on all conceivable subjects. Our Chamber of Commerce, the Lions and Rotarians, all civic, fraternal and other clubs and organizations are frequently called upon to assist in matters relating to the public welfare.

When this community spirit is farly recognized and observed and its importance conceded then we really become a city in which cooperation in city building is the watchword.

IT is an inexorable law, not of business alone but of nature itself, that effort is one of life's basic necessities. The moment a man stops truly exerting himself, that moment he begins to retrograde, to go down hill. He cannot do otherwise because of the cold, hard fact that it is utterly beyond human possibility to stand still. All life is movement forward or movement backward.

THE Democrats are considering the plan of organizing a state-wide Democratic body of the faithful which will function all the time instead of once every four years.

A CYNIC writing about the marriage relation claims that all men look alike and talk alike after they have been married a couple of years.

THERE is one consolation connected with extremely cold weather. It seems to knock out the flu germs.

Money No Longer Cleaned

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Irene Robeline married Guinn Holden, the young and handsome Texas minister, she expected to win his love. Guinn, a year before, had married the beautiful blonde Lilith, a gay and coquettish girl, who boasted of her ability to win him. Lilith died at childbirth. For eighteen years Irene fought a secret battle to root out the "gold and white" ghost of Guinn's first wife. She slaved in the household on the slender salary of the preacher. She was a splendid mother to the second Lilith, who grew up with all the beauty of the first as well as a cold, selfish, spoiled character. Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, Irene's children, were always secondary to Lilith with Holden. Tina wore her cast-off clothes and used her old books in college. After graduation Lilith became engaged to Roger Devereaux, son of wealthy parents. Later she postponed her marriage and persuaded her father to give her a year in New York studying voice with the $2,000 left him by a parishioner. She was ecstatically happy in the big city, especially after meeting Vivien Winthrop, who entertained her in her palatial home. Bill Chester, heir to millions, and engaged to an heiress, is attracted to Lilith, whose beauty is ravishing. Back home Tina is graduating from college and Irene suffers utmost humiliation when Guinn fails to give her a graduation present. Later Tina has a house party. Sheba, the colored cook, tells Roger Devereaux he has a "hoodoo." Dan Ripley, rich, young, handsome, returned from a trip, spends time with Tina, who works at her drawing and helps at home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

IRENE herself would like to know how this hoodoo was working. Dan came oftener than anyone, but apparently he came to see the family at large as much as Tina Guinn went often to see his father, who listlessly endured the heat, and lay in his steamer chair in the shady garden most of the day, careless as to what happened. Dan was picking up the details of his father's law practice and his business affairs, but he took plenty of time to play, too.

Now and then Irene went to the big house on the hill, to see the judge, and asked herself how anyone could be as indifferent to life as he was, but the thought that his life had been broken by the death of his love sobered her always. How would it be with her, if Guinn should be taken from her?

As the heat ripened the watermelons in the patch and burst open the cotton bolls in the fields, so it brought a rosier beauty, a more captivating grace to Tina, her mother thought. She watched her with a pride that was triumph and pain, because of her intense desire that this dear daughter might find happiness as complete as this unsatisfactory life allowed.

The lumberman's son and the ranchman's son wrote often to Tina, and Irene wondered if anything their letters contained had power to bring that soft blush of happiness to her child's face, that joyous curve to her lips, that light in her dark eyes.

One day she made bold to ask her, "Do you like either of these young men, Tina?"

The girl shook her curly mop. "I like them awfully well — but there's something more than that to love, isn't there? They say they love me — but that isn't enough, is it?"

"No, that isn't enough. There must be love on both sides. Don't ever make a compromise with love, my dear."

To herself she added passionately, "If I had held out for the reality of love long ago when Guinn asked me to marry him, if I had scorned this poor substitute love that he offered me, maybe he would have come to love me in time. Maybe he would have loved me if I hadn't married him!"

Tina mustn't marry until she was sure of love, of the supreme place in the heart of her husband!

She looked at the girl and said whimsically, halfway between a smile and a tear, "But a great passion is rather devastating."

Tina spoke firmly, "But I'd rather be devastated than just comfortable."

What is to be done with your child, or for her, when her whole happiness may depend on whether a certain young man admires the color of her eyes, the texture of her skin, the way she wears her clothes? And sometimes young men were cruel in their shortsightedness. . . .

One day Tina came in from a drive with Dr. Lundy. "We went to see the little Bates baby," she reported. "And what do you suppose Uncle Will told the mother to give it? Pot liquor! Who ever heard of feeding little babies on that?"

Irene's eyes showed ironic mirth. "Aunt Viny gave it to Lilith when she was a year old." Then a twinkle of mischief came into her glance. "And you wouldn't be alive yourself if it hadn't been for pot liquor!"

"How funny!" said Tina, as she went to meet Dan, who yodeled from the hall at that moment.

"Dan, Mother has just been telling me that I was a weakly baby and they kept me alive with pot liquor. Just fancy!"

"Good for pot liquor," said Dan. . . .

Summer time might be a vacation for most people, but not so for the pastor's wife. The boys had part-time jobs, so they had to be gotten up early and started off, while Tina must be allowed to sleep, after her company in the evenings. Pat had to be kept healthy and amused, and the church was forever making demands. She must look after Guinn, to keep him from over-exerting himself, yet without neglecting any responsibility. She must know who was ill or in trouble or in need, so that she or Quinn might go to call, and she must answer constant telephone calls to keep him from being interrupted.

"Having a husband and five children and a church is enough to keep any woman from rusting," she told Will Lundy one day.

"I want to see you rest more," he accused her.

"I'm all right."

"Funny how some women fag themselves out doing for other folks, while some women, Abby Whitaker for example, spend their time petting dogs and making up their faces. I'd like to see a law passed requiring everybody to do a certain amount of useful work. You'd land in jail first rattle of the box."

"Yes, the town will give her a grand funeral when she dies, but that won't rest her any," snapped Miss Mattie. "Then in a year her husband will marry again and give all her savings to a second wife."

"Don't be personal, Miss Mattie," laughed Irene. "Remember that I'm a second myself."

"You're feebleminded, but we're fond of you," said Will. "I don't know why I ever try to change you. I ought to recognize a hopeless case when I see one."

"If we all faced facts, the world would stop tomorrow," countered Irene cheerfully.

"Yes, imbecile optimism is what keeps the wheels going," growled Lundy.

"Some call it faith," Irene had a dreamy look in her eyes. . . .

The heat created a strange emotional tension, even while the physical being was relaxed and inert. Everyone seemed to feel it, and the telephone jangled nervously all day long as people thought up excuses to call the paster out. Guinn was jaded from the heat and from the incessant demands upon him, till Irene was afraid he would be ill, so one afternoon she made him go upstairs to a darkened room to rest while she put the telephone bell out of commission.

"If anybody is dead or dying they'll send a messenger," she told herself grimly.

Tina was lying down in her room, and Pat was prowling about the house in search of amusement, with an unconquerable aversion to an afternoon nap, for some inexplicable reason. From the kitchen came the sounds of a darky song, as Sheba went on with her ironing:

"'Monday mawnin', 'way fo' day,
White folks got me gwine,
Sad'day night when de sun go down,

Irene tried to take a nap herself, but even the pillow felt hot to her cheek, so she sat up and began to sew.

Presently she heard Pat say, "Oh, Tina, you sure can draw!"

"Wha-at?" came in Tina's sleepy drawl.

"These pictures in your book. Looks like Dan when he was a boy."

Tina's voice came quick with anger. "What do you mean, rummaging in my things? Put it down this minute!"

Irene started up in astonishment. Never had she heard Tina speak so to anyone. What could be the matter?

Pat rushed in to her mother, chin quivering, eyes blinking. She still clutched a book in her hands.

"What is it, Pat?" Irene took it from her. She saw a collection of rough sketches, mostly of one subject, Dan, and one on an old sheet of paper that had evidently seen much handling, a sketch, unfinished, of the boy that Dan had been almost ten years before.

Tina came in, in her blue kimono, her cheeks hot with indignation. "She had no right to meddle with my things!"

Pat quivered like a scared puppy, and gulped back her tears.

"Now, now, Tina," Irene said gently. "Pat, you did wrong to rummage in your sister's things without asking her, and you'll not do it any more, will you?"

"No," blubbered Pat.

Tina snatched the book of sketches from her mother and rushed back to her room, her blue kimono streaming behind her like a banner. Pat scuffled off to the kitchen to tell her woes to Sheba, and Irene turned to her sewing.

But her needle soon hung idle in her hands, as her memory pictured a scene, almost ten years before—Dan, with her children in the study, just after his mother's death, sitting to be sketched by Tina. She saw again the sculptured beauty of the boy as it had impressed her at the time, and the eager, absorbed face of the little artist at her task, saw again, too, the interruption of Lilith, with her summons to Dan to come play checkers with her.

Then she laughed rather shakily. "I guess this is an occasion for imbecile optimism."

She rose and put away her sewing, with a sigh. "Some call it faith."

SCOUT NEWS
BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

Area News

Troop 44 of Brainerd are holding a big hike next Sunday and plan on going to Gull Lake where a good time awaits them. Scoutmaster Axel Anderson has a cottage there and plans to entertain the boys in real carnival style. We like to see Scouts keep the "Out" in Scout.

Troop 52 of Aitkin is sponsored by the American Legion this year and looks for this year's Scouting year the biggest ever. Plans are under way for the Legion post to take the Aitkin Scouts to the North Shore of Lake Superior for a five day outing. Scouts of Aitkin are working hard for this privilege.

Brainerd troop 43 is planning to enlarge the troop even bigger than it is at the present time.

Staples troops are planning a Boy Scout drum and bugle corps. We expect the Bugle Corps to equal the splendid Scout band they have at the present time.

Troop 29 of Ironton, Minn., have eight Veteran Scouts in the troop. It shows some real leadership when boys stay with the troop for a period of five years or more. We congratulate Scoutmaster F. G. Mayberry.

Range Boy Scouts are working hard to win the troop honor pennant for the range district which is to be given for the first time at the March Court of Honor at Crosby.

Riverton troop 25 is again going after the Scouting work in real Scout style. For a time they have been inactive. We are looking for some real Scouting from Riverton.

Troop 48 is again active under the leadership of Harold F. Carlson. Mr. Carlson has been a Scout in one of our Range troops before moving to Pine River.

Troop 42 of Brainerd is putting in extra time to pull the troop up to the point where they can give the other troops in the area a good rub in any Scout activities. Much credit should go to Gerald Schrader now acting Scoutmaster.

Plans for an all area Roundup and Merit Badge exposition are under way at the present time. All troops should prepare themselves for the biggest thing in Scouting yet in this area. The all Area Roundup will in all probability be preceeded by District Roundups in the several districts of the area. Be prepared.

A meeting was held Monday, February 25 at the Aitkin Boy Scout district with 14 men present. Mr. Dennerly as district vice president of the council, presided at the meeting. Plans were made to complete their Boy Scout drive and the various committee positions were filled. The Aitkin district committees consist of the following: camping, G. W. Smith, Harold E. Olson, R. F. McHugh; troop organization, F. H. Osterhaut, F. T. Galernault, H. D. McNeil; Court of Honor, Judge Frank Hense, C. A. Larson, F. H. Osterhaut. We congratulate Aitkin upon the splendid Scouting spirit that is manifested.

Scoutmasters are requested to send in news to the Scout office so that we can run it weekly in the Broadcaster. Let's get that co-operative spirit.

"Married Life" Not Worth While
Blames Wives' "Nerves"

"Weak nerves," said a New York doctor recently, "in my estimation wreck more happily married lives than any other cause."

Besides making the sweetest disposition sour and irritable, nervousness is a terrible drain on your vital forces—it saps your youth and your strength and dulls your beauty. What a difference from the bright-eyed, vibrant girl he married. No wonder married life seems unbearable!

But you can get rid of your nervousness—speedily too—and become the steady-nerved, radiant woman you once were. Take a teaspoonful of Tanlac after meals and before going to bed and if it doesn't soon make a new woman of you—doesn't rid you of that tired, strained feeling—go back and get your money.

Go to your druggist now and get a bottle of Tanlac. Millions of folks have started back on the road to youth, health and happiness with this world famous tonic and there is no reason why you, too, can't begin today to rebuild your worn-out tissues and revitalize your entire system.

DR. NESMITH NELSON ADDRESSES ROTARY

President of Lions Club Reveals Things Which Luncheon Clubs Have in Common

MRS. KREKELBERG SINGS

Accompanist for Her Song Recital is Mrs. Louis Knudsen, Encores Are Given

Dr. Nesmith Nelson, president of the Lions club, addressed the Rotarians on Tuesday and told of many things which the luncheon clubs have in common. He told of some of the outstanding achievements of the Lions and then told how both clubs can act as efficient aids in Chamber of Commerce work and at the same time can undertake things not on the curriculum of the Chamber.

It should be the aim of all, he said, to stimulate pride in the community and to educate citizens to sell it to others. He referred, for instance, to the Archer cafe where the luncheons are enjoyed. The waitresses are uniformed, they are neatly dressed, give good service and are intelligent. They are taught to make the stay of a guest pleasant, and to give information, when asked, about the city, thus being of service to tourists and other travelers.

Business men can educate their clerks to do likewise. Garages, stores, offices, all can help to exert an influence which will do much to help the town. People like to visit a town where people take such an interest in it.

Big business, in many lines, said the doctor, is looking to the smaller cities for locations. Their employes gain many privileges not vouchsafed to them in large, crowded cities. Opportunities for wholesome recreation are more plentiful.

In taking stock of the community, said the doctor, it should include a survey of the store windows which may be empty and littered with old advertisements and cards. Attention should be directed to public places to see if they are kept in the best of order. The doctor's talk was well received and applauded.

Mrs. John H. Krekelberg sang and her accompaniments were played by Mrs. Louis Knudsen. Mrs. Krekelberg gave many encores in response to insistent demands of the Rotarians and pleased all. Her soprano voice is of great sweetness and purity and was a wonderful medium to interpret the song cycle she gave. Mrs. Knudsen was a fine accompanist, sympathetic and perfect in her piano playing.

Visitors were Rotarian F. N. Russell of Superior, Wis.; O. Wadenstein, Minneapolis, guest of Wm. V. Turcotte; D. C. Gray, guest of R. R. Gould.

R. R. Gould called attention to the Chamber of Commerce meeting Wednesday evening. J. P. Anderson spoke of Minot, N. D., and the special train to be run to the district meeting.

INDIAN RELICS SHOWN

Interesting Display of C. M. Taylor, Emily, at John M. Bye Clothing Store

C. M. Taylor of Emily has a very interesting dsiplay of Indian relics in the window of the John M. Bye Clothing Company. Mr. Taylor has picked these relics up from the shores of Lake Winnibigoshish, an old battle ground of the Indians.

Among the display are arrowheads, tomahawks, hammers and the flintlock. Some of the relics, according to Mr. Taylor especially the hammers, date back to the stone age, where they were also used as weapons. He states the arrowheads are very much in evidence around the lake shore when the water is low, which is an old Sioux and Chippewa battleground. Some of the arrowheads have a small burr on the end where they were fastened on the end of a spear and used for spearing. The plain ones often had poisoned ends.

The flintlock is a rather home made affair and is no doubt among the first that were used. The original flint is still there. The powder pan also shows. This is where the flint struck, igniting the powder, which in turn set off the gun.

Theatre Committee Hears Announcement of Tentative Plans for City's Interest

Clyde E. SHARKEY IS FAVORITE IN FIGHT TONIGHT

ODDS HAVE MOUNTED 2 TO 1 OVER STRIBLING

THE SOUTH HAS NEVER BRED A HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION

STRIBLING PROMISES TO GIVE ALL HE'S GOT IN THE BATTLE

By FRANK GETTY

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 27.—Tex Rickard's dream comes true tonight.

A fashionable throng in evening dress or flannels and summer finery, a crowd of nearly 40,000 including all those notables the late promoter envisoned at the ringside of this last of his great ventures in fight promotion, will watch Jack Sharkey of Boston and Young Stribling, pride of the southland, in action at Flamingo Park.

Sharkey is a heavy favorite, with the odds upon his chances of victory over the lithe young southerner mounting steadily towards 2 to 1. Jack Sharkey should win this fight handily.

The south never has bred a heavyweight champion and the black-eyed youngster who has his most important chance tonight promises to give all he's got in his bid to take his first big step upwards towards the now vacant title.

Jack Dempsey, whose amazing development in the role of promoter has made possible the successful culmination of the last fistic venture of his pal, Tex Rickard, said this morning that the last minute rush for tickets had swept the gate receipts well up past the $350,000 mark, and that the proceeds of the affair might approach $400,000.

Fair weather is predicted for the bout. The main event will start at 10 o'clock and will be broadcast by the Scripps-Howard newspapers over the entire country on a hook-up of the National Broadcasting Company including both the red and blue networks of stations.

By boat, train, auto and plane, the largest crowd that ever made its way to Miami Beach has come for the fight. The success of the venture, in view of the pessimism with which it was taken up by Madison Square Garden following Rickard's death, is almost unbelievable.

Both fighters made final statements to the United Press today:

Sharkey—"I'm in better shape for this fight than ever before and can't miss. I'm making no special promises about knocking him out. It all depends upon him giving me a fight, in which case I'll stop him."

Stribling—"I would rather let my work in the ring tonight do the talking for me. I have been trying to get Sharkey into the ring with me for a long time. Tonight I'll show you why he has been so reluctant to meet me."

The men will weigh in this afternoon at 2:30 at the Miami Beach Kennel club. It will be disclosed that the Bostonian has a weight advantage of some ten pounds over his rival.

While Stribling is outweighed, he is rated as hard a hitter as Sharkey, and the difference in weight may not prove a surmountable handicap to the Georgian. But it certainly is no help.

Stribling will receive about $70,000 for his efforts and Sharkey has a guarantee of $100,000.

Aside from the financial considerations involved, tonight's affair means much to the winner. He will go on toward the championship of the world while a sound defeat will leave the loser outside the heavyweight title consideration.

AT THE LYCEUM TONIGHT

The stage's greatest play brought to the screen by the movies' most popular comedian.

That is William Haines' new starring picture, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," which opens today at the Lyceum theatre.

Haines plays another of the gorgeously human roles which won him such great popularity in "Excess Baggage." The wise-cracking comedian has added a dose of humanness and pathos to his characterization which lifts him into the forefront of screen acting.

The story is the old familiar one that has brought tears and laughter to audiences in nearly every theatre in America for a generation. Haines is the wise crook who upsets the police departments of half a dozen cities and virtually defies arrest.

He is aided in his nefarious assaults on society by two of the funniest crooks the screen has ever seen, Karl Dane and Tully Marshall.

SHARKEY IS FAVORITE IN FIGHT TONIGHT

ODDS HAVE MOUNTED 2 TO 1 OVER STRIBLING

THE SOUTH HAS NEVER BRED A HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION

STRIBLING PROMISES TO GIVE ALL HE'S GOT IN THE BATTLE

By FRANK GETTY

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 27.—Tex Rickard's dream comes true tonight.

A fashionable throng in evening dress or flannels and summer finery, a crowd of nearly 40,000 including all those notables the late promoter envisoned at the ringside of this last of his great ventures in fight promotion, will watch Jack Sharkey of Boston and Young Stribling, pride of the southland, in action at Flamingo Park.

Sharkey is a heavy favorite, with the odds upon his chances of victory over the lithe young southerner mounting steadily towards 2 to 1. Jack Sharkey should win this fight handily.

The south never has bred a heavyweight champion and the black-eyed youngster who has his most important chance tonight promises to give all he's got in his bid to take his first big step upwards towards the now vacant title.

Jack Dempsey, whose amazing development in the role of promoter has made possible the successful culmination of the last fistic venture of his pal, Tex Rickard, said this morning that the last minute rush for tickets had swept the gate receipts well up past the $350,000 mark, and that the proceeds of the affair might approach $400,000.

Fair weather is predicted for the bout. The main event will start at 10 o'clock and will be broadcast by the Scripps-Howard newspapers over the entire country on a hook-up of the National Broadcasting Company including both the red and blue networks of stations.

By boat, train, auto and plane, the largest crowd that ever made its way to Miami Beach has come for the fight. The success of the venture, in view of the pessimism with which it was taken up by Madison Square Garden following Rickard's death, is almost unbelievable.

Both fighters made final statements to the United Press today:

Sharkey—"I'm in better shape for this fight than ever before and can't miss. I'm making no special promises about knocking him out. It all depends upon him giving me a fight, in which case I'll stop him."

Stribling—"I would rather let my work in the ring tonight do the talking for me. I have been trying to get Sharkey into the ring with me for a long time. Tonight I'll show you why he has been so reluctant to meet me."

The men will weigh in this afternoon at 2:30 at the Miami Beach Kennel club. It will be disclosed that the Bostonian has a weight advantage of some ten pounds over his rival.

While Stribling is outweighed, he is rated as hard a hitter as Sharkey, and the difference in weight may not prove a surmountable handicap to the Georgian. But it certainly is no help.

Stribling will receive about $70,000 for his efforts and Sharkey has a guarantee of $100,000.

Aside from the financial considerations involved, tonight's affair means much to the winner. He will go on toward the championship of the world while a sound defeat will leave the loser outside the heavyweight title consideration.

Haines plays another of the gorgeously human roles which won him such great popularity in "Excess Baggage." The wise-cracking comedian has added a dose of humanness and pathos to his characterization which lifts him into the forefront of screen acting.

The story is the old familiar one that has brought tears and laughter to audiences in nearly every theatre in America for a generation. Haines is the wise crook who upsets the police departments of half a dozen cities and virtually defies arrest.
